Dear whom this may concern,

Apprentice sports scientist (ref 123)

To whom this may concern I am [REDACTED] I was thrilled when I came across this position as a sport scientist. I am passionate about sport this stems from a young age as I spent most of my life playing sport competitively as well as having the opportunity to coach as well. I was recommended to fill out this application by a good friend who currently works in the sports industry who always praised the industry for its amazing staff and their hard work.

As I have previously mentioned I have many years of experience in not just playing sport but coaching this experience as well gives me a further insight into what the athletes and coaches need this will help me to come up with solutions that both the coach and athletes will be satisfied with. Due to completing multiple courses on sport, I have good knowledge on anatomy and physiology which is crucial within this role. I can work efficiently with co-workers and work well under pressure ensuring that I always have the athlete's best interest and ensuring that they are on the road to a steady recovery I will be looking forward to helping athletes to reach their desired goal and building rapport with players and coaches.

I have a huge amount of passion for every aspect of this job role alongside experience in different areas within sport which has enabled me to build essential skills like teamwork and communication that are also vital for this job role.
